In accordance with the migration plan <sup>3</sup> the WMO TDCF, (Code <sup>3</sup> (Code <sup>3</sup> such as BUFR) was completed in November 2010. By November 2014 dual dissemination of BUFR and TAC bulletins should have been terminated. After this date, meteorological observations such as SYNOP, TEMP, PILOT, CLIMAT should not be disseminated to GTS network (UK, Ireland and Netherland has already announced termination of dissemination of TAC SYNOP bulletins). Instead, observations all over the world should be transmitted in BUFR. In accordance with ICAO Annex 3, Amendment 78, OPMET data can be (based on a bilateral agreement) exchanged using IWXXM, an extensible markup language developed by WMO expert teams in cooperation with ICAO. Recode Weather comes with full support of IWXXM, it allows you to convert your OPMET TAC bulletins (METAR/ SPECI, TAF, SIGMET, AIRMET, Advisories) to IWXXM and vice-versa. TDCF Migration is a process of preparing every National Meteorological Service for this step. If you do not migrateÁÁÁ WMO plans to have all other meteorological data interchanged in TDCF in the following years. Therefore without reliable support of TDCF in your systems you will not be able to communicate with the rest of the meteorological world, to understand the data received as well as to send data to others. Keep up with others and be prepared Migration is indeed a long and difficult process consisting of several steps and at the end it most likely requires to upgrade and/or to change of your current hardware and software. This could be very costly and quite often even not possible due to missing support for legacy software. With Recode Weather your way to TDCF/IWXXM will be much smoother and less complicated. Recode Weather offers a stand-alone solution for transparent, fully-automated bi-directional conversion while adding proper metadata. TDCF descriptor tables and TM templates can be updated without software change. change.
